Citizenship and Sustainability in Organizations

Exploring and Spanning the Boundaries

Edited by David F. Muegghy and Alison Marshall

Series: Citizenship and Sustainability in Organizations

All the chapter authors are leading thinkers, who are pushing the boundaries of conventional thinking about corporate citizenship and sustainability to generate innovative models and practices. The book represents a starting point for debates about these challenges and presents commentaries, controversies, essays and insights that aim to be provocative and engaging, raise the important issues of the day and provide observations on what may be too new yet to be the subject of theoretical studies. It is aimed at researchers and students in the corporate citizenship, responsibility and business ethics, corporate governance and critical management studies.
